INTRODUCTION

I. THE NUNNERY OF ST. MARY CLERKENWELL

The nunnery of St. Mary Clerkenwell was situated north-west of the city of London, between the road leading from Smithfield to St. Albans by Islington (the modern St. John Street Road) and the river Fleet, then a considerable ravine, the 'hollow burn', of which the site is now approximately marked by Farringdon Road. South of the nunnery lay the priory of the Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem. Considerable remains of the nunnery survived the Dissolution only to be swept away at the end of the eighteenth century, when the rapid growth of the metropolis destroyed many of the vestiges of medieval London which had been spared by the Great Fire owing to their positions beyond the fringes of the areas destroyed. The main lines of the convent's plan can be reconstructed, and show that the cloister lay on the north side of the church, a feature found also at St. Mary Overy's, Southwark, where, as at Clerkenwell, the quieter side would be away from the sunnier south. Representations of some of the architectural details of various periods can still be seen, thanks to water-colour sketches of the late eighteenth century and to the early interest shown in the Gothic manner by Brayley and Carter, who drew some of their architectural examples from the nunnery.¹ The nunnery church was partially on the site of the present St. James's, but it stretched farther to the west, a fact which misled the Ordnance Survey into misplacing the position of the cloister. The church had been parochial long before the Dissolution, as was the case at St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, and did not become a parish church as a result of that event, as has been generally assumed.² The curious position of the incumbent as 'curate' after the Dissolution may be a clue to the position of the parish priest in medieval times as a dependant of the prioress. Under an act of 28 April 31 Henry VIII, on 21 March 1550 the bishop of London acquired jurisdiction over the site of the late monastery of Clerkenwell and the church and parish of Clerkenwell, which had hitherto been exempt.³

St. Mary's was founded in the reign of Stephen, just after its neighbour, the priory of St. John. This date is considerably later than that which is usually given by writers on either house, but it was satisfactorily established by J. H. Round.¹ The founder of both houses was Jordan de Briset, whose family were among the most munificent of the early benefactors of the nunnery.² Like St. John the Baptist's, Holywell, the nunnery has generally been regarded as a Benedictine one.³ In both cases, however, the nuns seem to have been really Augustinian, although in several documents they are distinctly called Benedictine. The truth seems to be that the importance attached to the name of the order, in this and other houses of women, was less than has been generally assumed. Unless important interests were at stake, words with very different meanings could be confused in the middle, as in other, ages.

The topographical index of architectural drawings made under the auspices of the Royal Institute of British Architects is of great use in locating original drawings.

The most comprehensive statement of the privileges of the nunnery is to be found in a bull of Urban III of 19 October 1186, which rather inexplicably is omitted from the cartulary. It is found in Archbishop Warham's Register, having been copied into it as a result of a visitation of Sittingbourne, though it is concerned not only with Sittingbourne church but with the property and privileges of the nunnery in general.⁴ It is interesting both in view of the rarity of early Papal bulls in favour of nunneries, and for the positive information it gives about the position of St. Mary's. In confirming grants to the nuns made by various benefactors, it summarises the endowments which the nunnery had received almost to the end of the reign of Henry II. The privileges include all liberties and immunities granted by King Henry, and provide for the free election of the prioress according to the Rule of St. Benedict, the protection of the community from various unreasonable demands which might be made on them by bishops or archdeacons, and the exemption of this property from the payment of certain tithes. Special reference is also made to the necessity for obtaining the consent of the chapter or 'the better and wiser part' of the community to any alienation of land or churches which the prioress might wish to make.

Further information regarding the early endowments of the nunnery is given by a series of royal charters of the late twelfth century. Four of these, dated c. May 1176, 1181-2 and 20 March 1190, are especially useful. No. 10, a charter of c. May 1176 (but possibly as late as April 1179) shows that by that date the nuns not only had been granted property in Clerkenwell and London, but also at Muswell, Chester, Fulbourn, Steeple, Grateley, Kingston in Cambridgeshire, Wanstead, Mountnessing, Tittleshall in Norfolk, and [Stoke] Newington. A charter ¹ of Henry II, apparently contemporary with No. 10, cannot be later than July 1176. It omits several of the grants included in no. 10, but is very important as it includes a number which are not in this and thereby provides an earlier terminus ante quem than would otherwise have been deducible from these general confirmations. No. 9 thus confirms grants at Blandford, Winchester, Tottenham, Shoebury, Haslingfield and Langford. The charter of 1181 also mentions Danebottom and Tollington at Islington, Willingale, Fyfield, Weston in Suffolk, Radwell in Hertfordshire, Wrattling and Pershore. Urban III's bull of 19 October 1186 adds Sittingbourne, Tottenham, Shoebury, North Weald Bassett, Blandford, Winchester, Dunmow, Langford, Haslingfield, Stanstead and the church of St. Mary Staining in London. Richard I's confirmation does not mention any parishes not mentioned in the earlier confirmations, except Reed in Hertfordshire, Boston in Lincolnshire, and Cadmore End in Buckinghamshire: the last two are not heard of again.

But at an early date the nuns began to concentrate their property, and they soon retained none in many of the parishes mentioned in these charters.²

A considerable number of the deeds in the cartulary are grants made by members of the family of the founder. Most of these were made before the end of the twelfth century: for they are summarised in a final concord between prioress Ermengarde and Lecia de Munteni. This final concord has been reproduced in full elsewhere.³ It is dated 27 April 1197, and deals with lands in Clerkenwell, St. Sepulchre's, Stoke Newington, Steeple and Wanstead. It has much in common with no. 83, including 10 marks consideration, and differs only in its greater precision.

For the first century of the nunnery's existence the story of its endowment is told in considerable detail in the cartulary. The last half century is also known in some detail through the survival in the records of the Augmentation Office of a number of account rolls.⁴ Like the cartulary, these account rolls can be supplemented by occasional documents which happen to survive. But for the intervening period comparatively little can be learnt from the muniments of the nunnery, except through the evidence contained in a selection of documents added at the end of the cartulary at various dates. A useful additional source is Sharpe's Calendar of Husting wills, which, though it omits details of significance for the nunnery's history, shows how during this period members of forty-eight London families remembered the nunnery in their wills. And for the fifteenth century, when bequests in Husting wills are rarer, some information may be derived from the wills proved in the prerogative court of Canterbury.¹ But if some important Londoners were benefactors, other important Londoners also disputed the nuns' rights to their property in the city.

² At the time of the cartulary they had property in eleven counties stretching over the country. The later evidence shows their property confined to five counties, all of which, except Dorset, are contiguous. This seems to indicate a deliberate rationalisation of the nuns' property.

INTRODUCTION

The nuns' tenants in 1490-1 and again in 1539 can be learnt from detailed account rolls. For earlier centuries most of the tenants whose names have survived are those with whom the nuns were involved in litigation, especially in London. Many of these are mentioned in Stow's Survey. Thus the City Plea Rolls record disputes in the reign of Edward I with dozens of London citizens including Thomas de Suffolk,² John de Armenters³ and William de Dureme.⁴ In the following reign her opponents included John Hauteyn,⁵ John Lovekin,⁶ Richard Chaucer,⁷ Richer Reffeham⁸ and Walter Nele.⁹ In Richard II's reign out of twenty-five known litigants nine are mentioned by Stow—John Flemmyng,¹⁰ John Wade,¹¹ Stephen Spilman,¹² John Lane,¹³ John Middleton,¹⁴ John Watford,¹⁵ John Weston,¹⁶ Thomas Alleyne¹⁷ and William Crowmer, draper.¹⁸ In the reign of Henry V the nuns had a dispute, among others, with William Askham.¹⁹

At the Dissolution the nuns held the manors of Beamont or Bemonds Leese at Eversden, Kingston, and Wimpole in Cambridgeshire, Blandford Martel at Blandford in Dorset,²⁰ Mynchyn at Dunmow in Essex and Willingale Mynchyn at Willingale Spain, Willingale Doo and Fyfield in Essex. In Middlesex the manor of Clerkenwell lay partly in Clerkenwell, and partly at Muswell and in Islington. 'Farms' were due to the nuns from lands in Clerkenwell, Muswell, Hadley, Edmonton, Islington, Tottenham, North Weald Bassett, Willingale, Totham, Dunmow, Sittingbourne, Manxey, Kingston and Blandford, besides a number of London parishes. Rents of assize or quit-rents were due from lands in Islington, Muswell, Stepney, Wanstead, Bowers Gifford, Eastwood, Shoebury, Mountnessing, Langford and Dartford, besides sixty-four London parishes: but many had in fact lapsed, especially in the parishes on the eastern side of the city, where they had been always less numerous.

The nuns held, in the early sixteenth century, the rectories of Clerkenwell, Sittingbourne, North Weald Bassett, and Great Totham: the surviving account rolls show that the farms due for Sittingbourne and Totham fell in arrear and money was spent on repairs at North Weald. Pensions were received from the churches of St. Mary Staining, Blandford, Broadwey and North Weald Basset, totalling 117s. 4d. Of these, all but that from Blandford fell into arrear in the few years covered by the account rolls. The nunnery seems at one time to have had an interest in the churches of Fulbourn and Holdenby, but these seem both to have been lost. Counties in which the nuns lost temporalities were Buckinghamshire, Cheshire, Gloucestershire, Hampshire, Hertfordshire, Norfolk, Northamptonshire, Oxfordshire, Suffolk, Surrey and Worcestershire.

The surviving account rolls of the nunnery are of the utmost value in correcting, amplifying and explaining the summary statement of the nuns' property contained in the Valor Ecclesiasticus. The Valor, for instance, does not analyse the parishes in which the London quit-rents lay: and though many of the parishes whence these payments were due can be learnt from the cartulary and the suits recorded in the City Records in the rolls of Common Pleas and Pleas of Land, yet these accounts contain the only evidence found for the nuns having any interest in the ten parishes of St. Andrew Hubbard, St. Bartholomew the Less, St. Faith in the Crypt, St. Katherine Colman Street, St. Lawrence Jewry, St. Mary Bothaw, St. Mary Fenchurch, St. Swithun, St. Edmund and St. Mildred Bread Street. No evidence earlier than that of the account rolls has been found for farms which the nuns had in the London parishes of St. John Zachary, St. Mary Abchurch and St. Swithun. On the other hand, the cartulary contains the only evidence found for rents in five parishes, All Hallows Barking, St. Audoen, 'St. Martin le Grand', St. Mary Magdalen Milk Street, and St. Peter the Little.

Property had evidently been gained in more parishes than it had been lost inside the city. The statute of mortmain was not applicable to property in the city, and consequently property was more frequently given there than in the country after this statute was made. In the country, Sussex was the only county in which property was given to the nuns after the date of the cartulary,¹ but on the contrary more distant properties were alienated.

In London itself farms were due from the following parishes: St. Andrew Holborn, St. Mary Magdalen Old Fish Street, St. Benet Gracechurch, St. Margaret Lothbury, St. Mary Abchurch, St. Mary Woolnoth, St. Mary Woolchurch, St. John Walbrook, St. Mary Arches, St. Leonard Westcheap, St. Michael Bassishaw, St. Stephen Colman Street, St. Giles Cripplegate (Grub Street) and St. Sepulchre's. Further urban farms were derived from Turnmill Street of ill repute in Clerkenwell parish outside the city.

There is reason to fear that the evidence of the account rolls is not quite exhaustive, for the accounts of 1490-1 mention a rent in the parish of St. Benet Gracechurch Street which was collected not by the bailiff but by the prioress and convent by a special arrangement. This rent is not mentioned in the other accounts. The Valor Ecclesiasticus also mentions a rent paid by St. John's Hospital of Jerusalem to the prioress¹ in St. Mary Somerset's which is not mentioned in the Clerkenwell accounts.

The accounts are in other respects not only more detailed than the Valor but also free from a number of errors of which it is guilty. The Valor gives no indication of the value of the site, makes no distinction between rents of assize and farms in London, describes a rent for the marsh of 'Orsell' in Bowers Gifford as at Orsett, does not include under the heading Essex the rents at Langford, Eastwood and Wanstead, appears to place at Eastwood a rent really at Shoebury, suggests that the land of the manors of Minchin and Bemonds were confined to Willingale and Kingston, transforms Holloway into Holywell and gives particulars of outgoings under the head of 'reprises' which are very far from complete.²

With regard to the personnel of the nunnery, there was a considerable body of priests who lived apparently in the precinct and the confessor might be a personage of great importance; indeed, one confessor, Goodrich, may have been the same as Henry VIII's chaplain of this name. Deeds in the cartulary show that one of the chaplains in the thirteenth century occupied an important position and was called master or procurator. This official may have been sometimes called the prior, as happened in some other nunneries. The office of steward was held by such men as Sir Thomas More and the Earl of Wiltshire.

In addition to the capellani of Clerkenwell, many deeds in the cartulary are witnessed by groups of clerici often called clerici de Clerkenwell. These clerks would have worn the tonsure and possibly attended a song school.³ They may have lived some form of common life in the house of the priests.⁴ Of these clerks the name of Benedict occurs at least as early as 1186 (no. 39) and at least as late as 1196/8 (no. 47). From early time the name of Clerkenwell was associated with the parish clerks who used to perform plays nearby. Jordan's foundation charter (no. 42) of about 1145 shows that the name of fons clericorum was older than the nunnery. There would therefore probably be no connection between the name of Clerkenwell and the clerici de Clerkenwell. The performances of the parish clerks⁵ were known to have taken place in

² Some of the grantees of the nunnery properties after the Dissolution are discussed by S. B. Liljegren in 'The Fall of the Monasteries and the Social Changes in England', Lunds Universitets Årsskrift, N.F., I, xix, Nr. 10, pp. 45, 48, 49, 74, 78-9, 81, 83, 84-7, 90, 95, 97, 103, 107, 114, 118, where he cites grants of Clerkenwell property to Edmund Jarnyng-ham; Wm. the reigns of Henry II and Richard II, but no evidence for miracle plays in London in the centuries between has been known hitherto. Such plays, however, certainly took place at Clerkenwell. The details are interesting as they show that though the plays were attended by the best company of late fourteenth-century England, they had earlier been made scenes of disorder such as to arouse the opposition of the prioress—an opposition which led to the nunnery being set on fire by the mob. It may be observed that the documents connected with the prioress's objection show that the miracles of which she complained were sometimes called ludi and this suggests that the ludi complained of in London church yards may have been miracle plays and not merely rough games.

Of the relations between the prioresses with the ecclesiastical authorities little is known. Few relevant documents survive except the bulls granted by Urban III, Celestine III and Sixtus IV, and the charters of Archbishops Theobald, Richard, Baldwin, Hubert and Stephen. A dispute between the prioress and the rector of Langford led to an appeal by the latter to Nicholas V.¹ A curious story of a metropolitan visitation which turned out to be the work of an impostor survives,² and the archbishops' registers, in addition to notes of inductions to the vicarage of Sittingbourne, record Warham's visitation of that church.³ Relations between the nunnery and the bishop of London were close, for not only had he the right of visitation, but he was also their patron. Relations between the convent and the bishop were not always free of discord, and the presentation to the vicarage of North Weald was a source of dispute between them.

The only visitation document in the cartulary is document DD, but on Gravesend's death the archbishop exercised his right⁴ of visiting during a vacancy in the diocese, and injunctions were issued which have not been preserved.⁵ The result of this dearth of material is serious so far as it concerns our knowledge of individual nuns and their characters. Large numbers of nuns are known by name, those of the decades each side of 1200 being learnt from the cartulary, those of Richard II's reign from a clerical subsidy roll,⁶ and those of the last years of the nunnery from the account rolls and pension lists.⁷ Furthermore, many names of nuns occur in wills, a source of information particularly instructive, as it necessarily reveals something of the social position of the friends and relations of the individuals concerned. From the list of nuns thus obtained it can be seen that many nuns were of families of considerable wealth and importance; and though the nature of the list cannot exclude the possibility of the nunnery having contained members of poorer families, there survives a revealing story of a would-be nun being sent away evidently because she was thought too humble, though a very different reason was given at the time.¹ The existence of Sharpe's Calendar of Wills may perhaps lead to an over-emphasis on the number of nuns belonging to London mercantile families in the late thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. It certainly shows the presence in the nunnery of the daughters of some of London's most substantial citizens, such as the famous Philip le Taillour, and William de Leyre in whose custody the captive William Wallace was placed. The persons whose wills are recorded in the Husting rolls favoured St. Mary Clerkenwell more than any other London nunnery,² as Eileen Power remarked, so that the predominance of the daughters of such families is probably a reality. This predominance is in marked contrast to the impression given in the cartulary for the second half of the twelfth century, when the daughters of rural magnates appear to predominate, many of them connected with distant Cambridgeshire. This gradual change of the social composition of the nunnery from rural to urban is a symptom of the way London was coming more and more to dominate its environs. And at the same time the property of the nunnery was becoming more urban and less rural, though there were of course London nuns and London rents from the first as there were country nuns and country rents to the last.

A study of bequests³ to the nunnery and to individual nuns⁴ shows that gifts were often ear-marked for particular purposes such as clothing or pittances. The existence of private property appears certain and individual nuns are occasionally found as parties to law-suits.⁵ The presence of family groups may be noted.⁶ It is curious that there is no other evidence for the activities of obedienciaries or of their having separate accounts, though marginal notes to the roll for 1490-1 seem to record the payment of some sums to the prioress and others to the receiver, in addition to one rent which was said to be collected directly by the prioress and convent to pay for their clothing.⁷ The oblations at Muswell⁸ were also collected directly, a nun being deputed for the purpose.⁹

⁹ The accounts for 1524-5 and 1526-7 show this was done by Katherine Smyth. In 1532-3 and 1534-5 the work was done by Joanna Fermour.

A treasurers¹ and a few sub-prioresses² are the only officials mentioned apart from the prioress among the nuns.

A list of prioresses,³ written in the fifteenth century, has been added at the end of the cartulary. This list shows that the earlier prioresses were called, as they call themselves in the surviving deeds, by their Christian names alone, whereas the later prioresses are referred to by their surnames also. This list, however, is inaccurate as well as incomplete. Little is known of most of the individual prioresses, though the list of nuns given in the late fifteenth-century clerical subsidy roll mentioned above shows that at that date not only were future prioresses living in the convent as simple nuns, but also certain older ladies who had ceased to hold office. Of the last prioress, a Sackville, many details may be gathered, down to such minutiae as the destination after her death of her red petticoat.⁴

The nuns and their servants were not the only occupants of the precinct. In 17 Edward I a corodarian was admitted who might visit her husband should she marry, without losing her corody, though he might not live on the premises, and any children were to be born outside the convent.⁵ The account rolls record considerable sums spent on the guest-house and show that an income was received from boarders, some of whom were evidently relatives of the prioress, while others, described as girls and gentle women,⁶ suggest a school. A third class of secular resident consisted of persons who occupied tenements, often of considerable value,⁷ in the outer precinct, over the gate and even in the cemetery. The number of rents from this source suggest a modification of the view that the dissolution of the monasteries in the city and suburbs was an important factor in the growth of London, as it liberated large areas of land which had formerly been inaccessible to secular persons.

2. THE CARTULARY

The cartulary of St. Mary Clerkenwell is contained (fos. 6-106) in the Cotton MS. Faustina B. ii, a codex which contains other documents. It is written in several hands of the first half of the thirteenth century. The folios measure 24-25 × 17.00 cm. The ruling consists of 29 horizontal lines, the top line not being written on. The two top and bottom lines, and often lines

The cartulary consists of two parts, Part I containing the royal charters and deeds relating to country estates, Part II containing the deeds relating to London.¹ The quire signatures show that each part was prepared separately, though probably with the intention of binding them together to form a single collection. There are 7 quires in Part I, the first quire being unsigned, the remainder being signed ii-vii. 9^a Angl. There are 6 quires in Part II, the first being again unsigned, and the remainder being signed ii-vi. 9^a Lond. All the quires except the seventh in Part I and the fifth in Part II consist of 8 folios exactly, but in neither of these cases does there appear to be anything missing. At the end of each part there were originally several blank leaves into which other deeds were copied soon after the completion of the work. The continuous numbering of the quires and the existence of these blanks suggest that no complete quires are missing at the beginning, middle, or end of the work. At the end of the cartulary various documents relating to the nunnery have been bound in as fos. 107-116, but they formed no part of the original cartulary and have no signatures.

Despite the division of the contents into country and town, and despite some grouping together of related documents, reference to a particular entry must have been very hard to one who was not familiar with the contents. It was doubtless to aid reference that the rubrics at the head of each deed were supplemented by marginal headings, which have somewhat suffered at the hands of a later binder. One consequence of this lack of a methodical system of arrangement, whether chronological, geographical, or by the names of donors, is the occasional duplication of documents. Nos. 328 and 334, 118 and 211, 220 and 322, and 221 and 323 are identical pieces.

The volume has been rebound at least twice, once perhaps in the time of Cotton and once comparatively recently. Probably at the first rebinding the folios were trimmed, thereby partially destroying the marginal notes, including some by Stow, together with a system of foliation indicated by Roman numerals in the top right-hand corner of each folio. These are less cut away in Part I than in Part II, and it is possible to reconstruct a succession of series, the first running [viii]-xiii (fos. 6-11), the next i-xii (fos. 12-23), the next i-xiii (fos. 24-36), the next i-xii (fos. 37-47), the next i-xii (49-60). In the centre of the top of the folio the last three groups are labelled e, f and g respectively. The second group is apparently d. If the first group was c, it is difficult to see what we can infer from the absence of a and b, or explain why the first group seems to begin with viii. Possibly this system of foliation has nothing to do with the present manuscript at all, but represents (as Mr. Hilary Jenkinson suggests) an unintelligent copying of the binder's signatures and foliation of another volume. There do not seem to be any grounds for relating them to possible Press marks of the original deeds.

The accuracy of the transcription of the documents in the cartulary may be tested in certain cases by comparison with the original documents, and in others from independent transcripts or summaries of the originals. As might be expected, deviations in spelling are frequent, and more serious errors occur as Cestrie for Cicestrie in no 1 and archiepiscope for archidiacono in no. 8. The lists of witnesses are also shown to be sometimes incomplete. But the text is upon the whole reliable, and where material for comparison exists, all divergencies of reading are given in the notes. Such documents are nos. 1, 7, 8, 13, 14, 16, 45, 47, 48, 53, 76, 205, 206, 296, 340, J, M, and Z.

The cartulary proper seems to have been written by very few scribes, though the additions to the text are made in a multitude of hands. Folios 6-10r. are written with the tops of the tall letters split and floriated. Folios 10v.-59v. show the tall letters seldom split and never floriated. These folios also differ from the preceding ones in that the letters are not looped. The hand responsible for these folios, which might be subdivided but for the difficulty that apparently different hands merge into one another,¹ is the style in which the greater part of the cartulary proper is written. Folios 102v.-103v. differ from earlier folios in appearing to be the work of an old and feeble scribe. This suggests that possibly the apparent differences in the earlier hands may be due to the fact that the same scribe returned to his task after occasional intervals had elapsed. The cartulary proper appears to be a unity, but it was evidently not executed in a hurry, for the slight changes of hand do not generally coincide with the divisions of the quires, as would have been the case if each quire had been given to a different scribe to write simultaneously.

The writer may have been employed at the same time in writing deeds for the nunnery, for the writing of the cartulary resembles that of Ancient Deed A.S. 88 in the P.R.O., which is the original of a release by Prioress Hawis.² If the cartulary was begun in the time of Prioress Ermengarde, as is suggested by the large number of deeds of her date and by her activity, attested by the number of final concords to which she was a party,³ in putting the titles of the nunnery on a sound basis, a possible candidate for the honour is Master Alexander de Fonte. He frequently occurs as a witness in the late twelfth century and he certainly wrote one of the originals, since in no. 228 his name is followed by the note qui hanc cartam scripsit.

Whoever it was who wrote the first part of the cartulary, he does not seem to have been personally familiar with the Essex property of the nuns, for the misspelling of Ginges and Linges twice in no 6. is best accounted for by supposing that in the original the first letter was long i as sometimes occurs, and that the copyist, not knowing the name of the place, read i as l. This would suggest that the first few folios were written by someone not closely connected with the nunnery, such as, for example, William de Ripa the vicar of St. Sepulchre's, who was employed by St. Bartholomew's Hospital in the first half of the century.¹ The writing is not William's, but whoever may have been the writer, he would, in doing his work, become familiar with the nunnery estates, and so would be a likely person to be employed in other capacities by the prioress.

Initial letters have usually been added in red or blue. Titles in red have been added in spaces which have been usually left for them.²

Of the later additions to the cartulary, the documents written on the folios left blank at the end of each of the two halves of the cartulary as it had been originally planned resemble one another in being written in a cursive hand with heavily stressed horizontal strokes in abbreviations, and heavily stressed downstrokes in d and beaver-tailed s. This indicates that they could not have been written into the cartulary much before or much after 1300. But the hand is not sufficiently homogeneous to lead us to suppose that they are the work of one scribe.

The documents bound in at the end of the cartulary on odd membranes which formed no part of the original codex are written in hands as varied as the dates of the documents themselves.

The hands of the marginalia, added as a much-needed aid to reference, fall into two groups. One group has floriated letters as in in parochia Sancti on fo. 101. The other is angular with inverted e's and runs right through the cartulary proper, e.g. Stanstede on fo. 9. Further marginalia were made for antiquarian purposes, and of these Stow was the author of all except the correction of Cestrie to Cicestrie on fo. 6.

Stow was in fact the most important of the owners of the manuscript after the Dissolution, as we know from a reference in the 'Genealogical Collections' of Sir Richard St. George written for Robert Beale, clerk of the Privy Council, about 1580-90.³ He already knew of its existence, even if he did not yet possess it, as early as 1566, for a note made by him in MS. Tanner 343, fo. 165, and headed 'Names and founders of colleges, hospitals, abbeys and cathedral churches, gathered out of original records by John Stow the historian, in the year 1566', includes a reference to Clerkenwell. The use he made of the cartulary is not only writ large in his Survey of London, begun in 1590,⁴ but is apparent in the numerous notes and the words which he underlined in the cartulary, especially in the second part which contains the deeds relating to London. It was thanks to the fact that Stow owned the manuscript and was willing to lend it that it became known to scholars, and that knowledge, spread by Dugdale, reached the writers of the great early county histories where property was held by the nuns. Using the cartulary thus at second hand, these scholars remained unacquainted with much that would have interested them. But it is the historian of London, now as in the days of Stow, who will find most material in this mine of topographical and biographical material, and it is fitting that amongst those who have helped me thanks are especially due to the late Miss E. Jeffries Davis.

NOTE: The table illustrates the growing preponderance of urban grants long before the Statute of Mortmain. The fact that no deed later than 1230 is entered in the cartulary before no. 60 suggests that however long before then the compilation started the writer may not have passed fol. 21 before that date.

NOTE ON TRANSCRIPTION AND EDITING

The Cartulary

In editing the cartulary the punctuation and use of capitals in the original have not been retained, and the employment of u and v has been standardised by the adoption of v initially and u medially. I has been used for both the short and long forms of the letter, except in the case of i final in Roman numerals when the practice of the manuscript has been followed. The distinction of c and t in the original has, however, been retained as far as possible. There is often a ligature between c and t.

Original Documents

An attempt has been made to give accurate transcripts of the originals of documents earlier than 1200. The punctuation and capital letters of the original and the distinction of i and j have been retained and all doubtful letters extended have been printed in italics. U and v have been standardised. Some documents not included in the cartulary are listed in Appendix 1.

Late Transcripts

The same rules are followed as in editing the cartulary with the exception that j final is adopted for i final in Roman numerals and c and t are standardised throughout.

Marginalia.

All Stow's marginalia are noted in the footnotes, but other marginalia which have been mutilated by cropping and are of little importance, have been omitted on the advice of Mr. Charles Johnson.

Note

Any changes in the text, any doubt as to the reading, and any deviations from the above rules are indicated by footnotes.

The Latin titles of deeds in the cartulary are the original titles from Faustina B. ii. The English headings are my own except in AA and BB, where there are English titles in the original, my own headings being distinguished by the use of square brackets. To facilitate the task of reference, each of the documents in the cartulary has been given a serial number, and the additions to the text inserted at the ends of the original country and London sections, together with the miscellaneous documents relating to Clerkenwell bound in at the end of the cartulary proper, have been headed with the letters of the alphabet. The corrected foliation of the manuscript as added in pencil for fos. 6-113 by the Museum authorities has been followed in preference to the sixteenth-century foliation in ink, which has blundered by the duplication of fo. 5 and the omission of fo. 113, and so is one ahead of the pencil foliation for the bulk of the cartulary.

Where any doubt as to the proper extension can be entertained the extended letters have been printed in italics. Where the usage of the manuscript is inconsistent that inconsistency has been retained.

PART I

DOCUMENTS I-221

Documents 1-221 form the first part of the cartulary as it was originally designed. Nos. 1-12 are royal charters and nos. 13-18 deal with land at Tottenham held of the kings of Scotland. The remaining documents are concerned with various properties in England which are mostly outside London.

These documents belong to the second half of the twelfth and the early years of the thirteenth century.

NOTE: Confirmation on 20 March 1337 (Cal. Chart., iv. 398) assures freedom from customs, perhaps in response to the request for this on the ground of oppression by taxes contained in P.R.O., Ancient Petition 7837. The original of the charter confirmed in 1337 is Brit. Mus., Topham Charter 26. Its probable date is 1175, as the witnesses are the same as those in no. 7 above. The document transcribed in the cartulary in the place of Topham Carter 26 seems to have been issued in pursuance about the same time. Together with nos. 1

DE DONO ROGERI FILII REMFRIDI.

Omnibus Sancte Matris ecclesie filiis ad quos presens carta peruenerit Rogerus filius Remfridi salutem.

Nouerit vniuersitas vestra me concessisse et dedisse et presenti carta mea confirmasse deo et ecclesie beate Marie de Clerek' iuxta Lund' et monialibus ibidem deo seruientibus in liberam et puram et perpetuam elemosinam pro salute anime mee et Alicie vxoris mee et heredum meorum et predecessorum nostrorum totam terram cum pertinentiis et libertatibus suis quam ego tenui in Dunmowa de feodo Rogeri de Munchanesi habendam et tenendam liberam [fo. 31r.] et quietam ab omni seculari seruitio et seculari exactione.

Et illud seruitium quod ego et heredes mei debemus Huberto de Munchanesi et heredibus suis pro predicta terra de Dunmowa nos reddemus eis de nostro: scilicet vnam libram cimini annuatim eis reddendam ad festum Sancti Michaelis pro omni seruitio.

68 CARTULARY OF ST. MARY CLERKENWELL

Ego etiam et heredes mei debemus warantizare et adquietare predictis monialibus prenominatam terram versus omnes homines.

Sciendum est autem quod ego dedi predictis monialibus cum predicta terra cartam ¹ Ricardi filii Ade qui terram illam mihi vendidit. Et similiter dedi eis confirmationem ² domini regis de eadem terra quam inde habui.

Predictae autem moniales receperunt Aliciam vxorem meam in sororem in capitulo suo faciendam monialem quando eidem Alicie placuerit.

Ita eciam quod si predicta Alicia alibi quam apud Clerek'w'll' in Anglia obierit predictae moniales ibunt vel mutent pro corpore ipsius portando ad ecclesiam suam de Clerek' vbi ipsa dedit corpus suum sepeliendum in quocumque habitu obierit et facient seruicium pro illa sicut pro sua moniali.

Concesserunt eciam mihi prenominate moniales quod post obitum meum facient seruicium pro me sicut pro vna suarum monialium.

ITEM DE DONO WALTERI FILII WILLELMI FRANCEIS IN PAROCHIA DE SIDINGEBURNE.

Notum ^a sit omnibus Sancte matris ecclesie filiis tam presentibus quam futuris quod ego Walterus filius Willelmi Franceis vendidi et concessi et hac presenti carta mea confirmaui sanctimonialibus ecclesie Sancte Marie de Clerek'welle duas solidatas redditus et duas gallinas de vna acra terre in parochia de Sidingeburne [fo. 57v.] quam acram Willelmus parmentarius tenet in valle de Chealewelle que scilicet acra terre iacet inter terram Elgari King et terram Osberti Franceis eisdem monialibus habendas et tenendas in perpetuum vel cui assignauerint de me et heredibus meis libere quiete integre finabiliter: reddendo inde mihi et heredibus meis annuatim duos denar' stirlingorum scilicet infra oct' Sancti Michaelis pro omni seruicio et seculari exactione et consuetudine: ita quod ego Walterus et heredes mei nichil amplius possumus exigere de predictis duabus solidatis redditus et duabus gallinis nec de predicta acra terre nisi tantum duos denar' pro omnibus seruiciis. Et si ^b Willelmus parmentarius vel heredes sui deficiant in predicto redditu soluendo predictae sanctimoniales tenebunt predictam acram terre finabiliter et quiete vel is cui eam assignauerint: reddendo ^c inde mihi et heredibus meis annuatim duos denarios pro omnibus seruiciis vt predictum est.

Et sciendum est quod ego Walterus et heredes mei warantizabimus et aquietabimus predictis sanctimonialibus vel cui assignauerint predictas solidatas redditus et duas gallinas et predictam acram terre contra omnes homines et omnes feminas.

Pro hac autem concessione et vendicione et warantizacione et carte mee confirmatione predictae sanctimoniales dederunt mihi decem et octo solidos stirlingorum in gersumam.

Hanc etiam vendicionem et concessionem et warantizacionem et carte mee confirmationem fide et iuramento affirmaui tenendam super textum ewangelii verbi dei.

Et quod ego Walterus nec heredes mei artem nec ingenium queremus vnde predictae sanctimoniales amittentes sint in predicto redditu vel in predicta terra et vt hec mea vendicio et concessio et warantizacio et carte mee confirmatio tractu temporis non possit irritari presentem cartam sigilli mei appositione corroborauit.

DE CONCESSIONE ET DIMISIONE MATHEI BLUNDI FILII GALFRIDI BLUNDI IN PAROCHIA DE COLEKERECHE.

Sciant presentes et futuri quod ego Matheus Blundus filius Galfridi Blundi concessi et dimisi et presenti carta mea confirmaui deo et ecclesie Sancte Marie de Clerekenew'II' et monialibus ibidem deo seruientibus octo sopas lapideas in ferronaria versus aquilonem capitalis mesuagii mei scilicet a sopis meis ligneis simul extendentibus versus occidentem vsque ad nonam sopam meam versus orientem scilicet octo soparum :

Prima ^a occidentalis cum solario continet in fronte iuxta vicum regium in latitudine tres vlnas et duos pollices, et in longitudine ⁱⁱⁱⁱ^{or} vlnas et i quarterium et i pollicem et in capite interiori ii vlnas et tres quarterios solario desuper tantum continente.

Secunda ^a sopa cum solario continet in fronte in latitudine ii vlnas et i quarterium et i pollicem, et in longitudine ^v^{que} vlnas et dimidium quarterium solario desuper tantum.

Tercia ^a sopa cum solario continet in latitudine ii vlnas et i quarterium et ii pollices in longitudine v vlnas et dimidium solario desuper tantum.

Quarta ^a sopa continet in latitudine ii vlnas et i quarterium et dimidium quarterium et tres pollices in longitudine v vlnas et iii quarterios et dimidium quarterium solario tantum.

Quinta ^a sopa continet in latitudine ii vlnas et i quarterium et dimidium quarterium et i pollicem in longitudine sex vlnas et i quarterium solario tantum.

Sexta ^a sopa continet in latitudine v vlnas et iii quarterios et dimidium quarterium in longitudine ii vlnas et i quarterium et dimidium quarterium et iii pollices solario tantum

Septima ^a sopa continet in latitudine ii vlnas et i quarterium et dimidium quarterium et vnum pollicem in longitudine v vlnas et iii quarterios et dimidium quarterium solariorum tantum.

Octaua ^a sopa scilicet vltima versus orientem continet in latitudine ii vlnas et i quarterium et iii pollices in longitudine v vlnas et tres quarterios et vnum pollicem solariorum desuper tantum continente.

Scilicet quicquid habui vel habere potui in predictis sopis cum solariis et cum omnibus pertinenciis suis integre in longitudine latitudine in lignis et lapidibus et rebus cunctis habendum et tenendum dictis monialibus et successoribus suis de me et de heredibus meis libere quiete bene et in pace in perpetuum pro sex marcatis quieti redditus quas Thomas frater meus senior dictis monialibus et successoribus suis dedit et legauit cum corpore suo: preterea reddendo inde annuatim mihi et heredibus meis pro omni seruitio et exactione et rebus cunctis de predictis octo sopis decem solidi ad quatuor terminos anni scilicet ad pascham xxx d. ad natiuitatem Sancti Iohannis Baptiste xxx d. ad festum Sancti Michaelis xxx d. ad na[fo. 61v.]thalem domini xxx d. sine omni occasione.

Et sciendum quod ego Matheus Blundus et heredes mei nullo modo poterimus nec debemus dictas moniales nec successores suas nec earum tenentes de dictis sopis nec soliis nec pertinenciis dehospitalari causa nos vel aliquem hominem vel feminam ibidem hospitandi nec amplius inde exigere nec capere nec clamare nec habere debemus quam dictos decem soli per annum terminis statutis.

Has igitur sopas predictas integre cum solariis et cum omnibus pertinenciis suis nominatis et non nominatis ego Matheus Blundus et heredes mei dictis monialibus et successoribus suis et cuicumque dare dimittere vel assignare voluerint contra omnes gentes inperpetuum debemus warantizare et adquietare per predictos x solidos annuos vt predictum est.

Et nisi fecerimus concessi quod ipse moniales vel earum assignati de predicto redditu decem solidi pro me et heredibus meis versus capitales dominos feodi easdem sopas adquietant sine omni occasione ^b et contradiccione.

Pro hac igitur concessione dimissione warantizatione adquietatione et presentis carte mee confirmatione condonauerunt mihi predictae moniales xxⁱⁱv marcas et dimidi sterlingorum quas eis debui de reragiis.

Et insuper dederunt mihi septemdecim marcas sterlingorum in gersumam.

DOCUMENTS A-H

Documents A-H are written in a later hand than those of the cartulary as it was originally completed.

Some folios had been left blank at the end of the two main divisions of the cartulary, dealing with country and town property.

Documents A-H were written on such blank spaces in the original volume.

Their dates fall between about 1250 and 1286.

- A. Writ to the sheriff of Essex on behalf of prioress Agnes. Waleram, son of Eustace de Rocheford, is to act in accordance with the fine made between prioress Margery and Waleram de Rocheford his grandfather about 30s. rent at Shoebury.

Date: Monday, 22 October 1285.

chapter of St. Paul's, A. Box 41, 1490, calendared in Ninth Report, p. 41b. The St. Paul's deed measures $34\frac{4}{35} \times 21\frac{9}{23} \times 2\frac{3}{4}$ cm. being wavyly indented along the top and right-hand sides. There were formerly three seals each attached to strips passing through two slits each. The strips for two survive and the one in the centre of the bottom of the deed still bears the seal of the nunnery. Red wax, 7 cm. long vesica shaped. The edges are chipped, the original width being perhaps 5.3 cm. An enthroned virgin, the child between her knees, both haloed, in her hand a fleur-de-lys inclined towards the head, upon a stem emanating from an orb. The child grasps a staff with a cross at the top in the dexter hand. The sinister arm, bent towards the elbow, holds what appears to be a book resting on the knee. There is a counter seal $4\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ cm. A virgin and child in a cusped vesicas, the lower portion obscured by a circular compartment containing a demi-figure robed and veiled, apparently kneeling, the head facing the dexter and hands clasped in prayer. The large seal bears the legend on the dexter side, MARIE CLERICORUM, the other side being badly chipped away. The counter-seal bears the legend PRIORISSE DE CLERKENWELL ✠ (The same conventual seal occurs as early as Ermengarde at St. Bartholomew's hospital and as late as 9 Henry VI; P.R.O., Ancient Deed B. 7983. For examples: in green wax, see deeds of prioress Alice (at St. Bartholomew's hospital) and of prioress Hawis (no. 340): in white wax, deed of prioress Cecilia (St. Paul's A. Box 15, 178); and red wax in 1275 (above) and in 1377 (Harl. chart. 53. H. 15). See Brit. Mus., Cat. of Seals, i. 512, and illustrations in Finks, History of Clerkenwell, p. 31, and Storer and Cromwell, History of Clerkenwell, p. 31. The counter-seal is found on prioress Alice's deed.)

DOCUMENTS I-EE

Documents I-EE are written in hands of widely varying style and on folios of widely varying quality.

All but one relate to the nunnery, but apart from this unity of subject and the fact that they happen to have been bound in Cotton MS. Faustina B. ii by a later binder, they have no real connection with the cartulary, and in its original composition they had no part. Their dates fall between the reigns of Edward I and Henry VIII.

- I. Letter to the bishop of London about a vacancy of the vicarage of North Weald Bassett caused by the death of John Haliwell. The nuns ask for the admission of John Wyck.

Date: 1511 (John Haliwell, vicar 1495/1511, appointed by the prioress and convent. He was succeeded not by John Wyck but by Henry Hickman through the bishop's patronage 24 March 1511. The dispute about the patronage was referred to Archbishop Warham and Sir John Finieux, chief justice of the King's Bench, who decided the patronage was to be exercised by the bishop and convent alternately, 10 December 1515. This was afterwards done. Newcourt, Repertorium, ii. 643).

Quas quinque marcas et dimid' annui redditus donauit et assignauit dictus defunctus monialibus de Clerkenwell' ad sustinendum in perpetuum vnum cappellanum pro anima sua diuina in earum ecclesia celebraturum prout in scripto testamentario dictas donationem et assignationem testante plenius et melius continetur.

The relation of the bequests in the memorandum to those in the enrolment is not clear. Calling the former i and the latter ii, presumably the 26s. in i, line 4, corresponds to the same sum from the fee of Matthew Bukerel, perhaps the 13s. 4d. in St. Vedast's corresponds to the same sum in that parish in ii, 19, and possibly the 16s. in i, 5, corresponds to the 16s. from that parish in ii, 17-18. Perhaps the 8s. 4d. in St. Botolph's Aldersgate in i, 8, is accounted for by the 8s. from thence in ii, 21, and the 4d. in ii, 22, and possibly the 13s. 4d. from the same parish in i, 7, came from the two houses there in ii, 22. A difficulty is that the total in ii is stated to be 5½ marks (73s. 4d.). This would imply that the two houses in St. Botolph's yielded apparently 6s. 4d. rent. The total in i comes to 77s., which must surely be wrong. Perhaps the 13s. 4d. from St. Botolph's should read 8s. 4d. composed of the 8s. and the 4d. discussed above. In this case the 8s. 4d. should evidently read 6s. 4d. If we suppose the order of these two rents to be reversed, the only emendation necessary would be that of the 13s. 4d. from St. Botolph's to 6s. 4d. The writer of the memorandum EE is not alone in misreading the original, as Sharpe calendars monialibus de Clerkenwell as 'monks of Clerkenwell'.

APPENDIX I

DOCUMENTS NOT INCLUDED IN THE CARTULARY

A list of the surviving documents which the Cartulary does not contain, but which might have been expected to have been found in it or might usefully have been added at the end, is given below. The first fourteen of them are all earlier than 1219, and might have been included in the Cartulary proper by its compiler.

The most conspicuous omissions are papal documents, none of which is found in the Cartulary, although transcripts of early bulls belonging to the nuns have been found transcribed in Warham's register at Lambeth. The collection of episcopal charters which must have been obtained by the nunnery is also ill represented, though the inclusion of some episcopal confirmations of churches shows that the exclusion of others was probably not deliberate. Archbishop Theobald's charter, one of the earliest and most important of the house, was ignored by the compiler. Even the series of royal charters, with which the Cartulary begins, leaves out one, which is now in the British Museum, MS. Topham Charter 26.

The Cartulary contains many deeds relating to places outside London which are mentioned in the royal confirmations and which the nuns retained until the Dissolution, but the discovery of original grants relating to Totham and Tottenham, and the records of final concords at the P.R.O., show that it does not contain all the deeds which might have been included relating to these properties. The collection of the deeds relating to London properties in the cartulary is certainly not complete; it omits, for example, charters relating to the parishes of St. Martin Orgar,¹ St. Mildred Walbrook,² and St. Sepulchre.³

Such omissions were probably due to chance, for the inclusion of a single charter twice in four instances shows that the compilers' methods were rather haphazard. But it may be of some significance that the Cartulary contains no deeds at all relating to Cadmore End, Chester, Boston and Pershore. These places are all mentioned in the royal confirmations, but there is no evidence of the nuns having retained any interest in them, and most of them were remote. The reason for the omission of deeds relating to these places may well be that the nuns had already parted with these properties before the compilation of the Cartulary.

² The nuns held land in 1222-3 'in vico ferronum in parochia Sancte Mildrethe super Walebrok inter terram que fuit Ricardi filii presbiteri versus orientem et terram monialium de Clerkenwell' versus occidentem'. See The Black book of St. Augustine, ii. 520-1.

³ The gift from Robert the goldsmith mentioned in no. 296 is not recorded in the Cartulary.

APPENDIX 2

SURNAMES IN THE CARTULARY

The names of persons mentioned in the Cartulary have been arranged in the index under their Christian names, not their surnames, for in most cases the surnames are probably not true ones. There are, however, some instances of true surnames. Thus 'de Mandeville', 'de Bancis' and 'de St. George' are evidently no mere indications of an individual's place of origin.

Of the persons described as filius, most are probably merely being identified by the names of their fathers: but apart from such well-known names as FitzWalter, there are instances where true surnames of this type seem to be being evolved, in some of which the Fitz disappears. Thus John son of Helicun or Helizun appears as John Herlicun, and Peter son of Neuelon or Newelon is the father of Andrew Neuelon.

Of the names of occupations, most seem to have been not surnames but true descriptions of the occupations of those described by them. One individual is called pistor or bolongarius, another arcennarius or le arcener, and the widow of an avenarius, who evidently continued her dead husband's business, is called avenaria.

Of the names derived from personal peculiarities Blund and Calvus seem to have been family names. But Blundus and Albus, apparently used as the name of the same man,¹ evidently refer to his complexion, and one Calvus is called le Cauf.

Lexicographers have drawn little on material concealed in cartularies for English and French words embedded in the Latin. Typical names of this type in the Cartulary are bocheler, brasur, capeller, champenas,² costerier, fenere, fruiter,³ here, husebunde, meriner, neulor, newemann, peauconer, seller and waider; ⁴ before some of these the article is omitted. For mesguecer, a whittawyer, see no. 297.

² Cf. Robert Champeneis in Norman Moore, i. 383 note.

³ Fruit-dealer, A.D. 1483, O.E.D. Another early example of the use of a word is Ginnur, which is cited for 1300 in O.E.D.

⁴ Cf. note on 'Wader' in E. Weekley, Surnames, pp. 120-1.

THE CARTULARY AND THE EARLY TOPOGRAPHY AND HISTORY OF LONDON

The Cartulary of St. Mary Clerkenwell is one of a small group of manuscripts mentioned by Sir Frank Stenton in his bibliographical note to his essay on Norman London.¹ The information given in records of a later time containing incidental early material could, he writes, 'be much increased by the use of other cartularies, not yet accessible in print'.

The topographical and biographical information in this cartulary cannot be summarised, as it is mainly valuable as potentially providing answers to questions which would occur to persons working in other fields. The gradual narrowing down of the dates at which certain witnesses, frequently occurring in early London charters, and the gradual amplification of the map of Norman London produced by Miss Honeybourne for Professor Stenton's Essay, are not subjects adapted for a brief summary. A few salient points may, however, be indicated.

The Cartulary contains the earliest-known references to the parishes of St. Benet Finke,² St. Botolph Aldersgate,³ St. Bride Fleet St.,⁴ St. Dunstan in the West,⁵ and St. Michael Candlewick St.⁶ It contains a reference to St. Mary Staining⁷ earlier than any hitherto known, but an earlier reference still occurs in Urban III's bull.⁸ The Cartulary also contains references to parishes not heard of elsewhere—St. Alphege Honeylane,⁹ and St. Martin le Grand.¹⁰ An unknown ward of Fromund the alderman is revealed,¹¹ and so is the soke of Henry son of the bishop outside Cripplegate in Everardswell street.¹²

The Cartulary is equally valuable in another direction. As long ago as 1908 the Guildhall Library Committee published A. B. Beaven's The Aldermen of the City of London. Beaven's work was 'practically exhaustive . . . from the date of the earliest of the Letter Books preserved at Guildhall, viz. the

² No. 288. This is noticed by Harben and is the only one of the early references to London parishes in the Cartulary noticed by scholars.

⁹ No. 256; probably an alternative dedication of Allhallows Honey lane.

¹⁰ No. 277; perhaps a loose way of describing St. Leonard Foster Lane.

¹¹ No. 310. This land was legally in the archbishop's soke; see no. 6. cf. H. W. C. Davis, Essays in Medieval history, pp. 46, 55-9; W. Page, London, map on p. 133; Stow, i. 41, ii. 7 and 358; Munimenta Gildhallae, i. 241; Eng. Hist. Rev., xiv. 428.

¹² No. 297; perhaps the same area as the 'soke of Cripplegate' which was 'granted to St. Martin's in 1067' (W. Page, op. cit., p. 144; cf. 162).

year 1276', but for the period before that date any great collection of London charters such as that in this cartulary might be expected to yield valuable addenda, whether in the form of new names or dates earlier or later than those hitherto known for aldermen whose names were already familiar.

Aldermen mentioned in the Cartulary who are not included in Beaven's work, though some of their names occur in print elsewhere, are Joice Blund (no. 347), Henry de Cocham (no. 339), Lawrence son of Lambert (no. 270), Fromund (no. 310), Henry le alderman (nos. 110, 203), Matthew (no. 200), Peter le Alderman (no. 203), Bartholomew de St. Martin (no. 299), Stephen (no. 337), and William le Wite (no. 223).

Of these, some are mentioned in Page's London and Norman Moore's History of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, but no mention is made in these two works of Joice Blund, Lawrence son of Lambert, Peter le Alderman, Stephen or William le Wite. Stephen occurs about 1237/8, which shows that he cannot be identified with the Stephen mentioned by Beaven, who was prior of Holy Trinity, Aldgate, and alderman of Portsoken, and who died in 1188.

Norman Moore, in his History of the Hospital, mentions Henry le Alderman (i. 102, 103, 271, 272, 349, 504), Henry de Cocham (i. 325, 331, 333), Matthew (i. 89) and Bartholomew de Saint Martin. (i. 241, 243, 360).

Fromund is discussed by Page (p. 255) and Norman Moore (i. 264, 299, 303).

Robert Blund is stated by Beaven (i. 236) to have occurred as alderman some time between 1221 and 1248: in no. 288 he occurs in 1216/17, but instead of this being an early occurrence of the Robert Blund who was alderman of St. Clement Candlewick between 1221 and 1248, this may perhaps be a late occurrence of another Robert Blund, alderman of Bread St., who was sheriff in 1196/7 (ibid., i. 364-5).

In no. 262 Ralph Sperling is described as alderman before 1222. Beaven says (ibid., i. 373) he was succeeded by Arnold FitzThedmar about 1255, and the earliest date in which he cites him as occurring is 1229/30 (ibid., i. 366).

THE CHRONOLOGY OF THE PRIORESSES

The list of prioresses appended to the Cartulary and printed on pp. 270-1 leaves a good deal to be desired. The correct order of Ermengarde's successors is actually Isabel, Alice, Eleanor, Hawis, Cecilia, Margery Whatvyll. Christina is dated 9 Stephen in document BB. She occurs 1152/61 in Theobald's charter and might seem from no. 310 to have been succeeded by Ermengarde just before the first appearance of the latter in Urban III's bull of 19 October 1186. Ermengarde occurs as late as 10 February 1199.¹ Isabel occurs in 1206, when she acknowledged an obligation to pay Roger Palmer 2s. a year on land which had been given to the nuns in free alms next the chapel of St. Mary Staining.² Perhaps the vacancy between Isabel and Alice occurred in 1208, when the nunnery is known to have been in the king's hands.³

Apart from nos. 286-7, a date for Alice is given by her appearance in 1221/2.⁴ Her seal, which is the same as that of Ermengarde attached to the original of no. 296, is attached to a grant to John le Chofrir of land in St. Nicholas Shambles.⁵

For Eleanor we have no precise date except 1221/3 (no. 278). The earliest datable appearance of Hawis is 1231/2, in no. 321. On 13 January 1237 she made an agreement with the dean and chapter of St. Paul's about tithes at Heybridge.⁶ She was a party to final concords with Richard the forester about land in Fyfield in 1240 and with Henry son of Hugh of Essex about the church of North Weald Basset at Easter 1244.⁷ This is her last datable appearance. An interesting document in which she attourns Ralph de Gardino to make an agreement about Stanstead with the abbot of Waltham is preserved in the Waltham Cartulary.⁸ Her seal is attached to the original of no. 340.

Cecilia is mentioned in 1245 and 1248. On 25 November 1245 she released to Peter de Newport, archdeacon of London, a rent received of Pentecoste Crouste, goldsmith, in the parish of St. Martin Ludgate, in exchange for another rent.⁹ Part of the seal survives. On 17 May 1248 she was party to a fine about land at Newnham (Murren).¹⁰

Margery Whatvyll (Watewyle, Watevile) appears between 1251/2 and c. 1264/5. In 1251/2 she quitclaimed to the city, for 40s., 3s. yearly rent for the Friars Minor from Stinking Lane in the parish of St. Nicholas Shambles, on land once held by Alexander Lorbart.¹ In January 1252 John, prior of Holy Trinity Aldgate, made an agreement with her about an interest in a tenement in Edmonton.² In November 1254 she was party to a fine with Walram de Rocheford about land in Shoebury. In the Waltham Cartulary³ she grants 10s. revenue at Stanstead to Holy Cross, Waltham. Her last datable appearance is in document C of 1264/5.

Alice Oxeney is called de Oxon' in City Records, Pleas of Land roll 39. She occurs in an entry in the feet of fine of 3 February 1271 with Alice de Barewe about Newington, in another apparently of 1274/5 with Lawrence de la Forde about Edmonton, and in another at Easter 1276 with James de Montibus about Dunmow.⁴

Agnes or Anneys Marci (Marti, Marty; also de Marisse or de Vernay) first occurs on 14 February 1283.⁵ In Document V she seems to have recently died, but a successor is mentioned on 15 March 1305 in City Records, Common Pleas roll 30.⁶

No references have been found to Denise Bras or Margery Bray. Joanna Lewkenore sold a quit-rent to the city for the Friars Minor in 1306/7.⁷ A most unfavourable opinion has been expressed about her over a case about tithes in which she was involved with the prior of St. Bartholomew's in 1313.⁸ Document K shows that she made a grant to William Pynnere and his wife on 24 June 1328.

Joanna Fulham or de Fullham occurs on 12 December 1340, 16 November 1342, 8 March and 9 September 1343, 7 August and 20 December 1344, and in 1345.⁹ She is perhaps identical with the nun Joanna Fulham who received a legacy in 1327.¹⁰

Idonia or Edeyne Let (also Litier, Lutier, Lyters, or Lewtier) occurs in 1357-8 and on 9 April 1368 as prioress. She was still alive, but no longer prioress, in 1379/80.¹¹

Katherine Braybrok was apparently prioress in 1379/80. In Clerical Subsidy Roll, 42/4a, the prioress is not named and Katherine does not appear.

The name of Lucy atte Wod occurs below that of Idonia Litier and above that of Margaret Bakwell and Joanna 'Vyan'. According to City Records, Pleas of Land, 103, Katherine was prioress on 27 May 1381, but she had ceased to occupy the position by 8 June 1385.¹ There is no evidence to show whether she did in fact precede Lucy.

Joanna Vyeyne or Vyan occurs in various cases relating to stopping of roads and ditches between c. 1387 and 26 June 1403.² For her frequent litigation about London properties see City Records, Pleas of Land, 114 and 117, and Common Pleas, 114 and 119.³

Margaret Bakwell occurs in various disputes about city properties between 15 February 1406 and 14 February 1414.⁴ Brit. Mus., Topham Charter 7, is a general pardon to the prioress and convent for all transgressions, which shows that she was still prioress on 1 September 1424.

Isabel Wentworth appears in litigation about city property between 4 and 23 Henry VI.⁵ Ancient Deed, B. 7983, is an agreement between her and the Charterhouse. She occurs as late as 6 November 1447.⁶

In 1464 Margaret Bull is found recovering arrears of rent at Blandford.⁷ The accounts of 1490/1 refer to Margaret Bull, late treasurers.

Agnes Clifford is mentioned on 21 May 1473.⁸

The name of Katherine Green (or Grene) appears on four receipts to the Steelyard Merchants dated 3 April 1480, 4 April 1485, 27 March 1486 and 16 April 1487.⁹

Isabel or Elizabeth Howssey (or Huseye) had ceased to be prioress by 1502/3.¹⁰ Document BB was evidently compiled before this date, for the next prioress, Rose Reygate, is not included. Her name occurs on official receipts for quit-rents to the Charterhouse dated 23 Henry VII and 4, 6, 10, 12 and 13 Henry VIII.¹¹ For a grant by Rose of the right of presentation to Sittingbourne, for one turn only, on 12 January 1519, and for a lease of tenements for 30 years in Lombard Street on 6 March 1522, see Westminster Abbey Muniments, 5190, and Ancient Deed E. 690.

Isabel Sackville, the last prioress, is mentioned as a nun in a will of 10 August 1506.¹² She was already prioress by 2 February 1526.¹³

APPENDIX 5

TOPOGRAPHICAL SUMMARY OF NUNNERY PROPERTIES

The individual history of each property of the nunnery is of more local than general interest. It has seemed better to publish studies of the separate properties in a number of journals and to these reference can be made.

I. SPIRITUALIA

- (1) Personal tithes ; see Index 2, p. 357.
- (2) Canterbury diocese,
Sittingbourne ; see forthcoming note in Archaeologia Cantiana.
- (3) Ely diocese,
Fulbourn ; see forthcoming note in Proceedings of Cambridge Anti-quarian Society.
- (4) Lincoln diocese,
Holdenby ; see forthcoming note on 'The property of St. Mary Clerkenwell in the South Midlands' in Oxoniensia.
- (5) London diocese,
Clerkenwell and Clerkenwell detached, Muswell ; see Bod. Lib., MS. D. Phil. d. 395, fo. 885.
Great Totham ; see Trans. Essex Arch. Soc., N.S., xxiii. 3-6.
North Weald Basset ; ibid., xxiii. 7-10.
St. Mary Staining ; see forthcoming note in London Topographical Record.
St. Mary Woolnoth chantry ; see ibid.
- (6) Salisbury diocese,
Blandford St. Mary ; see Proceedings of Dorset Natural History and Arch. Soc., lxviii. 43-5.
Broadwey ; see ibid., lxviii. 45.
- (7) Worcester diocese,
The nuns had no claim to Ampney Crucis, Eastington or Ampney St. Peter ; see forthcoming note in Trans. Bristol and Gloucestershire Arch. Soc.

II. TEMPORALIA

- (1) Buckinghamshire,
Cadmore End and Edlesborough ; see Records of Bucks., xiv. 365-6.
- (2) Cambridgeshire,
Eversden, Haslingfield, Hildersham, Kingston, Tadlow, Wimpole and Wrattling ; see forthcoming note in Proceedings of Cambridge Anti-quarian Society.
- (3) Cheshire,
Chester ; see Journal of the Chester and North Wales Architectural and Arch. Soc., xxxvi. pt. 2, pp. 178-9.

- (4) Dorset,

- (13) Norfolk,
Burstons and Tittleshall ; see forthcoming note on 'The Norfolk properties of the nunnery of St. Mary Clerkenwell and the Capra family' in Norfolk Arch. Soc. Year Book.
- (14) Northamptonshire,
The nuns had no property at Muscott ; see forthcoming note on 'The property of St. Mary Clerkenwell in the South Midlands' in Oxoniensia.
- (15) Oxfordshire,
Heyford (Warren) and Newnham (Murren) ; see ibid.
- (16) Somersetshire,
Clerkenwell nunnery had no property here as wrongly stated in Year Book, 4 Edward IV Mich. 4 (Year Books, parts 9 and 10 (1680), 4 Ed. IV, pp. 25-9, misquoted in Tanner, Notitia, as 4 Edward IV, Mich. 40). The claim of the prioress of Clerkenwell on the parson of the church 'of C.' was perhaps really that of the prioress of Mynchyn Buckland, a sisterhood of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, on Canyngton ; cf. Rev. T. Hugo, in Somerset Arch. and Natural History Soc. Proceedings, x. 47 and 55.

(17) Suffolk,

Cockfield and Weston ; see forthcoming note in Proceedings of Suffolk Institute of Archaeology and Natural History.

(18) Surrey,

Newington (Butts) ; no references to property in this county other than no. 12 and no. 280 have been found.

(19) Sussex,

Manxey (the only parish outside London where the nuns acquired fresh property after the completion of the cartulary) ; see 'The Sussex property of St. Mary Clerkenwell and the Sackvilles', Sussex Notes and Queries, xi. 38-40.

(20) Worcestershire,

Pershore ; see Trans. Worcestershire Arch. Soc., N.S., xxiii. 75.

INDEX I. PERSONS AND PLACES

References are to the numbers or lettering of the documents, except when otherwise indicated; roman figures indicate pages of the introduction.

The main entry of a person is in each case under the Christian name, with a cross-reference from the surname (if any), though some of the latter have also been indexed separately to avoid the multiplication of cross-references. Names such as William Fitz-Alice are indexed as William, son of Alice, with a cross-reference from, or a duplicate entry under, Alice, William son of.

Names are given in their usual modern English form, with cross-references for any significant variations. Names for profession, rank or status are given in the index after each individual Christian name.

Places in the city of London are indexed under London.
